INSTRUMENTATION AND SUBSTITUTIONS • CHANGING THE ARRANGEMENT

You may include or exclude players as you see fit. Substitution of instruments is acceptable, as long as the students enjoy playing the music. Be aware that substitutions may have an impact on your band.

You may make changes to arrangements, so long as they maintain the integrity of the original piece and the style of that composer. If material is added that does not produce the same spirit and intent as the original, the power of the music is weakened.

You may choose to:

- Feature soloists other than those indicated;
- Extend solo sections; or
- Add introductions as is appropriate to this style of music.

However, you do not need to make these types of changes to have a successful recording—more is not necessarily better. You want to make choices that best showcase your band.

For more information and ideas, please refer to our Jazz Academy website at academy.jazz.org/media-library

STUDENT ELIGIBILITY

Students must be in grades 9–12, enrolled in high school, and between the ages of 13 and 19. If necessary to complete parts, you may substitute older or younger players.
